WASHINGTON, April 11, 1846

Congress. There is a calm-a portentous calm. Mr. C. J Ingersoll is gathering up his proofs in one end of the capitol, and Mr. Allen and Mr. Dickinson are the capitol, and Mr. Allen and Mr. Dickinson are co-operating with him against Webster in the other. Three against one, and yet we challenge you that Webster will head them all—and that C. J. Ingersoll, whatever he may prove, will not disprove the sweeping allegations of falsehood. He stands meantime, as passive under these charges of falsehood, as any man could be expected to stand.

Oregon was not touched, to-day, in the Serate upon the main order. Several resolutions for information were passed, of some importance; and that's about all.

The House, after considering a number of private cases, adjourned.

"The Doctor" promises a chapter upon the week's proceedings, to-morrow.

WASHINGTON, April 12, 1846. Information of a very important character arrived here last night from the South, and it is thought that the late arrival from England has brought out some thing similar from our minister at London. The Cabinet were with the President this morning before 10 o'clock, and remained with him for some time. What the nature of the information is, I have not yet learned, but may to-morrow. I am aware, however, that a mutinous spirit pre vails among a large body of the army of occupation before Matamoras, owing to the intolerant and bigot-ed conduct of General Taylor, the officer in com mand, towards two-thirds of his command. That proportion of the troops profess the Roman Catholic religion, and yet are forced, under the penalty of imprisonment and the loss of several months pay being stopped, to attend a Presbyterian place of worship This partly, if not wholly, accounts for the large number of desertions that have taken place in that army since its location at Corpus Christi and before Matamoras. The following extract of a letter from-a portion of the troops there, and which is published Matamoras. The following extract of a letter froma portion of the troops there, and which is published in the New Orleans La Propagateur Catholique, shows but too plainly the seeds of the disaffection among them.

"The Catholics form the greatest part of the army o occupation, that is, about two-thirds. As such we cannot willingly depart from the spirit of the church, by sasisting at and taking part in the lectures, sermosa, or prayers of ministers who have not received their mission from the spostles, and hold no power from on High. We consider them but as welves in the clothing of lambs, of which our Divine Master has warned us to beware.

"But in the circumstances in which, as soldiers, we sre placed, we cannot violate the orders of our officers, tho compel us, indiscipalinately, without regard to our consciences, every Sunday, to attend the strmons of a Presbyleriam minister, whose words are mainly directed to insulting, calumniating, and abusing the Catholic church. We know, nevertheless, that one of the acticles of the Constitution declares that every man is free to worship God in accordance to the dictates of his own conscience; and if so, how is it that soldiers are denied that right.

"The edifice in which the Presbyterian exercises are held, serves also as a theatre during the week, and it is there we are forced to march every Sanday, to listen to abusive declamations against our faith, under pain of imprisonment, and the loss of three or four months pay, for disobedience of orders.

"We have believed it to be our duty te make you acquainted with this intolerable grievance, and our desire is that the facts should be published, at least in substance, in some newspaper, that the public may see what a mockery is made of our conscience."

Comment upon the foregoing extract from the letter of those troops, is unnecessary. It shows

Comment upon the foregoing extract from the letter of those troops, is unnecessary. It shows the unfortunate spirit of persecution of a particular denomination of christians, which is growing up in our country, and which, if once tolerated by the government in those who hold subordinate stations under it, in connection with the private abettors of fanaticism, the hopes and prospects of the founders of our tree institutions, for their unlimited perpetuation, will prove in a short time from now, to have been but an idle dream. I cannot credit the opinion for one moment, that either the President, or Secretary of War, has given the least countenance to this unparalleled folly of Gen. Taylor; for, if they have not, his recal from the army ought to be instantaneous and unconditional. No apology that he may offer, should ext. Acrate him from the punishment that he justly deveroes, for forcing two-thirds of his troops against their conscientious convictions, to attend a place of worship for which they have no regard; and that, too, in front of an enemy of the same religious tath as themselves, with whom, perhaps, they may, the very acxt moment be ordered out to fight. Is it reasonable, therefore, to expect that these men, save under the infliction of a seared conteit. Accept the total public the state of the purpose of placing the matter before the public, and to show them the dangerous condition in which we are placed on the Mexican frontier by the toly of one of our officers. The government must attend to this in time, or else disastrous consequences may follow from a continuance of it for a month or two longer.

The President has been most unfortunate during the first year of his administration, in selecting subordinates, who have, by their intolerance and bigotry, in this respect, alienated from him those, without whose support, he never could have reached his present station. He has only one remedy left to change this feeling that I can see and learn from my intercourse with persons of that persuasion, and that i

"Rye rodgers, and Corn dodgers," among the starving masses of England and Ireland; when the Kilkenay wife shall change a supper of diluted buttermilk, and diseased potato peelings, for a smoking pot of Indian hasty pudding—when the round-faced and jolly corn-pone, "old Virginia" style, shall smoke upon the griddles of the English peasantry. Then we shall give to those poor creatures a visible illustration—a tangible, edible proof of the "horrors" of southern slavery; for one of its horrors is, that the slaves of the south have an abundance of "hog and hommony," "herrings and hoe-caken."

We recollect hearing at a methodist camp meeting last summer, in the Old Dominion, a chorus, which carried with it, so mething of the assurance of a prophecy. The saints were collected around the rude altar of the encampment, a group of mourners in earnest lamentations, were bewailing their sins in the straw; while the brethren and sisters
